

Cambridge

Cambridge is famous worldwide for its association with the colleges that lie within its boundaries. Without those colleges the city would not be the remarkable place it is today. However, there is more to explore here; for example some fantastic architecture, little cobbled courtyards and interesting shops and boutiques.

Sightseeing in Cambridge

Firstly, meet your knowledgeable local guide on your journey into this wonderful city. Cambridge is most widely known as the home of the University of Cambridge, which was founded in 1209 and is consistently ranked one of the top five universities in the world. The University and its thirty one colleges dominate the centre with beautiful cobbled courts, chapels, gardens and bridges. However, Cambridge also has a modern, dynamic pulse. You may wish to take a look at Christ's College, where a young Charles Darwin studied, or King's College, where the Chapel is the grandest and most beautiful building in the city and ranks amongst the most important examples of perpendicular (late gothic) architecture.
